

Season of Dreams

Two Weeks Alone

In the

Peaked Hill Dunes

This new collection from poet Jonathan A. Wright combines the written word with four folios of striking photography from a two-week solo residency in the dunes of outer Cape Cod. The work is directly drawn from journals and texts from the time alone, fashioned into a range of startling, sometimes whimsical, and always engaging images and reflections.

The long stretch inside of the natural world and outside the boundaries of typical 21st century daily life provided the poet with all that is rich, spare, and on the move in the early spring on the North Atlantic. Those who appreciate the wild and the intimate of natural world will enjoy this work.
